

Coagula Art Journal

The LowDown on High Art online

Thursday, January 22, 2010

The Los Angeles Convention Center is hosting FADA's LA Art Show ("FADA" stand for "Fine Art Dealers who get an A for taking excellent notes in class"). The show runs thru Sunday...

The opening night was pouring rain, but the LA Convention Center does NOT have a leaky roof (like Barker Hangar) so the festivities were dry and absolutely mobbed with art folk. Check it out...

Art dealer George Stern... kinda looks like he would be the prime suspect in an episode of Murder She Wrote, doesn't he? He would turn out to be innocent and end up selling Angela Lansbury a lost Giotto on canvas.

It is Los Angeles Art Month. Nobody told us, we could have pulled out the crayolas and printed MFAs on toilet paper like the big art schools do...

L-R: Karen Murphy, Lee Huang and David Lawrence at David Lawrence Gallery's booth.

Carole Feuerman and one of her dry "wet" sculptures at the Sculpturesite Gallery's booth.

The pink pile of fur is "sculpture" and everyone knew to walk around it.