Gallery Highlights

Arcadia Contemporary

Established in 2001 as Arcadia Fine Arts, Arcadia Contemporary has been at the forefront of promoting highly skilled, representational artists. The gallery, initially located in Manhattan's vibrant Soho District, quickly gained international recognition for showcasing works that demonstrated the artists' mastery of painting and drawing techniques, combined with their unique, signature styles.

In 2014, the gallery evolved into Arcadia Contemporary, reflecting its commitment to featuring artists who, while employing timeless techniques, create imagery that resonates with the contemporary world. This shift in focus has allowed Arcadia Contemporary to curate a diverse collection of sculptures, paintings, and photographs by a range of talented contemporary artists.

Among the gallery's roster of artists are Kesja Tabaczuk, Hideo Tanaka, Ivan Franco Fraga, Tim Rees, amongst many others.

In 2011, Cube Gallery relocated to its current space in London's vibrant Marylebone neighborhood.

Cube Gallery's expertise extends beyond the walls of its gallery space. The team frequently collaborates with interior designers and architects on projects across the UK, Middle East, North America, and Asia.

Melissa Morgan Fine Art

Melissa Morgan Fine Art [MMFA] was born out of Melissa Morgan's passion for art and her commitment to community engagement. As a gallerist, Morgan's philosophy is grounded in the intimate nature of art and the belief that exploring and sharing interpretations of art can lead to personal growth and a deeper understanding of ourselves and others.

From its inception, the gallery's primary focus has been to bridge a blue-chip contemporary program with important, mid-career artists, with a particular emphasis on Southern California. Today, MMFA represents a diverse range of national and international contemporary artists working across various media.

Among the gallery's notable artists are Anthony James, known for his mesmerizing light sculptures; Andy Moses, whose abstract paintings explore the interplay of color and texture; Ed Moses, a seminal figure in the Los Angeles art scene; David Yarrow, a renowned fine art photographer; and Michael Childers, celebrated for his iconic portraits of Hollywood legends.
