LA Art Show Gets Ready for an Exciting Return January 19–23, 2022

We're excited to update you on the upcoming LA Art Show 2022, now only two months away! With an emphasis on presenting engaging state of the art themes and the next edition of the compelling DIVERSEartLA program – focusing on the nexus of art and the environment – the LA Art Show is gearing up for a dazzling launch of the 2022 Los Angeles art season!

Following her successful debut as producer and director of the highly successful 2021 LA Art Show last summer, Kassandra Voyagis is orchestrating another fantastic show. “I am so honored to be once again bringing the art community together in Los Angeles, both with local participants and an international presence. With a focus on the global effects of humankind on the planet, it is the right time to present voices from around the world, and I am excited to facilitate this wonderful event.”

As the first live show to showcase the NFT craze, the LA Art Show has built a reputation for leading the pack. Once again, visitors can expect even more eye-catching new media, digital and cutting-edge art trends.

As the world adapts to the pandemic, the LA Art Show is gradually rebuilding its customary international roster of exhibitors, welcoming new and returning galleries from around the world. Among some of the galleries we’re delighted to welcome back, Arcadia Contemporary, Mizuma Art Gallery, Jane Kahan Gallery, Neue Kunst Gallery, Pan American Art Projects and Rebecca Hossack Gallery all return in 2022.

LA Art Show Gets Ready for an Exciting Return
January 19–23, 2022

Among the many anticipated highlights of 2022, DIVERSEartLA returns with a new ecological lens. Curated by Marisa Caichiolo, the next edition of DIVERSEartLA will examine artistic portrayals of the environment and the role of humanity’s place in the world. The exhibition will foster an important dialogue about the Earth’s past, present and future, encouraging further discussion about the global climate crisis and approaches to solving it.

For the upcoming edition of the LA Art Show, DIVERSEartLA invites art museums and institutions to partner with science and environmental museums in creating a world of immersive experiences focusing on the looming impact we face as the planet warms.

Caichiolo explains, “DIVERSEartLA 2022 will encourage visitors to confront the complex challenges of our global climate crisis and imagine potential solutions. This topic is at the heart of a growing number of art narratives, including exhibitions built with high-tech innovations, designed to inspire artistic appreciation and the desire to respond to environmental challenges, reinforcing the value of translating environmental advocacy into art.”

Stay tuned for more details in December!
